Re: Project3

May 29, 2007

Project3 currently underway in Barcelona, Spain, is an important effort on the part of a group of progressive artists and educators to analyze the social construction of knowledge and the various ways such knowledge is reproduced in contemporary educational settings. This project takes into account spacial, temporal, and corporeal dimensions of knowledge formation while analyzing the relationship between power, knowledge and pedagogical practices. This project enables students themselves to become critical researchers and practitioners in their own knowledge formation. It is an excellent example of critical pedagogy in action. Project3 is an exciting and impressively innovative project and has much to offer the international pedagogical community. I offer my strong support and assistance to Project3 and know that it will serve as a model for similar projects developed by progressive educators in numerous locations worldwide.

Sincerely,
